

Polar Shift and Bird Migration

By David Michael

The Dream

In the early morning of the 28th of October 2018, I was here in AZ not far from my home in the desert in SE Arizona. I looked up in this dream-vision and saw thousands of birds swarming, circling and then slowly beginning to fly to the south-east of my location.

Illustration 1: Parrot Migration

I then saw tropical birds walking along the ground in groups. I saw a small group of 3 parrots following by parakeets walking together and talking. They were having a discussion about being lost and trying to find their way home.

I wondered in the dream how they arrived this far north since parrots are commonly found in the tropics to the South in Mexico and South America. I then awoke.

South East

The South East of here is toward the Rio Grand that goes into the Gulf of Mexico. Why to the South East I wondered and not due south into Mexico and South America? I had to ask why were these tropical birds so far north and lost in the first place? Birds have a earth magnetic polls (north-south orientation) sensor system in their brains that give them very refined direction and never get lost.

I then realized this dream was about a time when the polar shift has occurred and South America is no longer due south and north was no longer due north. The South-East direction indicated to me that the new magnetic north pole was as much as 45 degrees to the North-West of its current location. The birds were still following magnetic north but the new magnetic north gave them a new direction South toward the Gulf of Mexico.

Birds to the North

The fact the birds were too far north is the result of a polar shift where the earth itself shifts but the air above the earth and the birds in the air do not shift and move. On the surface of the earth itself, the effect would appear as a sudden wind hundreds of mile per hour in force destroying much on land. So the earth rotates suddenly and leaves the birds in their former location or blown elsewhere. I have to ask the question, was the SE direction that birds were walking the new south? Yes. The location of the new equator is unknown to me at this time.

New Magnetic North

I then did some research on this and found a number of scientists who have projected where the new magnetic north would occur if we had a magnetic pole shift or a polar shift. The mystical scientists say they are getting visions and dreams on this and have then done research on the scientific probability of this shift happening and its resultant location.

Many suggest it is a reversal of poles where north becomes south and south north but not exactly. Others think that it is just a wobble shift relocating the new north pole still somewhere in the northern hemisphere. This is like a top that slows down and at times, it is observed to have a polar wobble (new spin center) before stopping all together. In this case the earth will keep turning but as the magma shifts from one part to another deep underground, the center of gravity changes and causes a change of spin center we call the polar axis.

Climate Change

As I continued research into this phenomena, I realized the polar shift was well researched by both conventional scientists and mystical scientists. Both camps say such an event will radically change the climate... ahhh... the real reason for climate change as the polar shift is happening now!

The pivot point for this shift seems to be in Ecuador with the Equator in this region staying in much the same location just rotating slightly.

SE Arizona Climate

So what will the temperature be like in SE Arizona? Looking at the likely location of the new Equator and the degree north of the Equator that the shift may cause, Arizona may take on the climate of the northern border of America like the current climate in Eastern Oregon, Idaho and Montana. Not sure I would like the colder weather. The snow birds (tourists escaping winters up north) will have to rethink where they will escape to in the winter.

It is suggested by this shift that the new north pole is located in the north Pacific south of Alaska whereas the new south pole will be located near Cape Horn on the southern tip of Africa. These places are to be avoided. Not sure how the southern Africans will survive with the radical change of temperature to arctic conditions.

My dream is one of these efforts in the mystical sciences to determine the outcome of such a shift and this article will become a source reference for the future when deciding the best place to live during such a time. Many ex-patriot Americans are escaping to the tropics in Eastern South America. Perhaps they need to rethink this decision and go to the west coast of South America?

For me living in South East Arizona at 3400 feet, I will definitely need a well constructed and insulated dwelling and a source of firewood with a wood stove to keep warm.